

Contributors

Ahmed Bawa is a theoretical physicist and holds the position of Vice-Chancellor and Principal of Durban University of Technology. Until August 2010 he was a faculty member of the Department of Physics and Astronomy at Hunter College and a member of the doctoral faculty at the Graduate Center, City University of New York. He has previously, held the position of Deputy Vice-Chancellor at the University of Natal and then at the University of KwaZulu-Natal. He is Fellow of the Royal Society of South Africa as well as the Academy of Science of South Africa of which he was one of the inaugural vice-presidents and is a current Council member. Contact details: Acbawa@dut.ac.za

Katie Bryant works as a writing researcher/coach with the Botswana-UPenn Partnership at the University of Botswana in Gaborone, Botswana. In this context, she co-leads a study on medical students' learning practices and challenges. In addition, she is completing her PhD in the Department of Integrated Studies in Education at McGill University in Montreal, Canada. Her main research interest is investigating the rhetorical reasons for African researchers' low rates of academic publication. Prior to working in Botswana, Katie worked at Canada's International Development Research Centre (IDRC) as a research intern/writing coach. Contact details: bryantkatie@gmail.com

Karen Bargate is a senior lecturer in the School of Accounting, Economics and Finance at the University of KwaZulu-Natal (UKZN). Karen has lectured for over 20 years mainly in the disciplines of Managerial Accounting and Financial Management. The past nine years have been at UKZN and prior to that at the Durban University of Technology. Her area of research interest is in accounting education for students studying towards the Chartered Accountant qualification. Contact details: bargate@ukzn.ac.za

Contributors

Anthony Collins is a critical social psychologist with interests in violence, trauma, and consumer culture. His work explores the interface of psychology and critical social theory, using qualitative research methods and critical analysis to develop new ways of framing problems in these areas. He is involved in human rights and violence reduction activism, especially around issues of gender-based violence. He was recognised for distinguished contributions in the area of curriculum development and for his innovative teaching practice. He was also honoured with the CHE/HELTASA teaching Excellence Award in 2013. Contact details: collinsa@ukzn.ac.za

Noor Davids is a lecturer at the University of KwaZulu-Natal in the School of Education. His teaching and research interests include Curriculum and Assessment, History of Education, HIV/AIDS and sexuality education and Education systems. He studied at the University of the Western Cape and the University of Cape Town where he completed his doctorate and professional training. Before joining the University of KwaZulu-Natal, he taught at higher education institutions in Cape Town, South Korea and Saudi Arabia. He is also an external supervisor at the Durban University of Technology. Contact details: davidsnoor56@gmail.com/davidsmn@ukzn.ac.za

Rubby Dhunpath is the current Director of Teaching and Learning at UKZN. His previous appointments include that of Teacher Educator at UKZN, Researcher at the Human Sciences Research Council and Rockefeller Post-doctoral Fellow at the University of Illinois. A former Research Fellow of the Sanpad and Spencer Foundations, he now provides leadership in various teaching and learning initiatives at UKZN, aimed at promoting scholarship in teaching and learning and institutional research. Rubby has researched and published in education & language policy, lifehistory research, organizational ethnographies and doctoral education. Contact details: dhunpath@ukzn.ac.za

Kathleen Diga is a Project Manager to the South African Research Chair in Applied Poverty Reduction Assessment at the School of Built Environment and Development Studies, University of KwaZulu-Natal (UKZN), South Africa. She is current completing her PhD at the Institute for Social Development, University of the Western Cape, South Africa. Her main focus of research is in the poverty and economic dimensions of information and communication technologies for development. Prior to joining UKZN, Kathleen worked at the International Development Research Centre (IDRC) as a research officer under the ICT4D Africa (Acacia) initiative in Johannesburg and Nairobi. Contact details: Digak@ukzn.ac.za

Busisiwe Goba is a Lecturer in Mathematics Education at the School of Education, University of KwaZulu-Natal. She holds a master's degree in Mathematics Education and currently completing her PhD in Mathematics Education. Her research interests include: Languages of education in the teaching of Mathematics in the Foundation Phase; Postgraduate education research and supervision; and professional development of mathematics teachers. Contact details: Gobab@ukzn.ac.za

Krish Govender is currently a post-doctoral fellow at UKZN. He is attached to the Educational Studies cluster at the Edgewood Campus and has been holding the award since 2012. His research interests include multilingual education, sociolinguistics, language policy and doctoral education, and has published in the areas of multilingual education and doctoral education. He has also taught on various honours modules and a master's module on contemporary language issues. Contact details: krishg@webmail.co.za

Seth Hakizimana is a PhD student in the field of entomology at the School of Life Science, University of KwaZulu-Natal, South Africa. He was involved in Supplemental Instruction (SI) as an SI leader from 2006–2011. In 2010 he initiated a new programme based on the idea of peer teaching and learning. His main interest in the field of education is how learning through learner interaction may positively affect the social and cognitive learning environment. Contact details: seth.hakizimana@gmail.com

Andreas Jürgens is a senior lecturer at the University of KwaZulu-Natal, South Africa, in the School Life Sciences. His main research interest is the chemical ecology of plant-animal interactions. He has lectured in biology at different universities in Germany (Bayreuth, Ulm) and South Africa (UKZN). Since 2009 he has been module coordinator for a first-year module (Life on Earth) with large student numbers (>800 students across two campuses). His view on education is influenced by a pragmatic question: how can we develop effective and motivating teaching and learning methods in permanently changing environments? Contact details: juergensa@ukzn.ac.za

Contributors

Suna Kassier is a lecturer, Post Graduate Academic Coordinator and PhD candidate (UCT) in Dietetics and Human Nutrition at UKZN. She is currently the academic coordinator for the training of 600 Nutrition Advisors for the Department of Health throughout KwaZulu-Natal. She has served as acting head for the Discipline of Dietetics and Human Nutrition from 2008-2009. Prior to joining UKZN in 2007, she was a senior lecturer at Durban University of Technology for 13 years. Contact details: kassiers@ukzn.ac.za.

Simon B. Khoza (PhD) is a head of Curriculum Studies & Educational Technology at the University of KwaZulu-Natal, South Africa, in the School of Education. He has been involved in Higher Education for the past 20 years and has a keen interest in the convergence of educational theory, Educational Technology (E-learning), Curriculum Studies, Mathematics, Chemistry, Technical Education and Dance-Sport. He has been teaching and supervising both under-graduate and post-graduate students in the discipline of Curriculum Studies and Educational Technology. He has published in local and international journals: Contact details: khozas@ukzn.ac.za

Kenneth King is Emeritus Professor in the School of Education and also School of Social and Political Studies. He was the Director of the Centre of African Studies and Professor of International and Comparative Education at the University of Edinburgh till September 2005. His research interests over the years have focused on skills development in both the formal and informal sectors of the economy and on aid policy towards all sub-sectors of education, including higher education. Currently he is researching and writing a book on China's soft power and capacity building in Africa (James Currey, 2010). Contact details: Kenneth.King@ed.ac.uk

Lokesh Ramnath Maharajh is the Discipline Head and lecturer in Education Studies in the School of Education at UKZN. In addition to lecturing philosophy and sociology of education to undergraduate B Ed students, he lectures to and supervisors M Ed and PhD students in Curriculum Studies. Lokesh's research interests are values education, religion education and higher education. He has published in education and higher education. Contact details: maharajhrlr@ukzn.ac.za

Suriamurthee Maistry teaches in the School of Education at the University of KwaZulu-Natal. His research interests include curriculum and pedagogy as it relates to disciplines in Commerce at both high school and higher education levels. He is a NRF rated researcher (C3). Contact details: maistrys@ukzn.ac.za

Prithashni Naidu obtained a B Speech and Hearing Therapy from the University of Durban-Westville. She worked at the university from 1992 to present in the field of teaching and learning. She co-ordinated, developed and implemented the Community Studies Module at UKZN Faculty of Health Sciences, and subsequently worked on the Department of Public Health's Hospital Management Programme (MPH). She also co-ordinated the UTLO grant on assisting MPH and PHD students with their research process. Contact details: Naidup2@ukzn.ac.za

Delia North is an Academic Leader (Statistics) and Distinguished Teacher (UKZN Award, 2004) in the School of Mathematics, Statistics and Computer Science at UKZN. She has over 25 years' experience in the teaching and design of Statistics curricula at university. Over the years, her passion for teaching and Statistics have resulted in her becoming a leading figure in South African Statistics Education circles, where she has lead various national projects aimed at building statistics capacity at school and tertiary level. Currently she is a member of the UMALUSI Executive committee, the South African Statistical Association (SASA) Executive committee, chairs the SASA Education Committee and is a Board member of the Institute of Certified and Chartered Statisticians of South Africa (ICSSA). Contact details: northd@ukzn.ac.za

Julia Preece is currently responsible for the Adult Education PhD cohort programme at UKZN and principle investigator for a community engagement action research project funded jointly by grant from the NRF and UKZN's

Contributors

Teaching and Learning Committee. Her previous appointments include that of Professor of Adult Education at the National University of Lesotho, and Professor of Lifelong Education at the University of Glasgow in the UK where she continues to hold an honorary research position. Julia has researched and published extensively in the fields of university community engagement, adult education and lifelong learning. Recent publications include a 2012 co-edited book titled Community Engagement in African Universities (publisher NIACE). Contact details: preecej@ukzn.ac.za

Reshma Subbaya is currently a researcher in the Teaching & Learning Office (UTLO) at UKZN with research interests in teaching & learning in higher education and institutional research. More specifically her work examines higher education performance trends, student academic progression and university promotions. Before joining UTLO, she was employed as a project leader & facilitator in the health sector focussing on research projects in decentralised learning, technology enhanced learning and evaluation research. She has a BSc (Information Systems), an MBA and is currently a PhD candidate at UKZN. Contact details: subbaya@ukzn.ac.za.

Myra Taylor (PhD) is Professor and Research Manager in the Discipline of Public Health Medicine, School of Nursing and Public Health Medicine, where she participates in the Graduate Programme for Public Health. She received a grant from the UTLO to assist Masters' and Doctoral students in their studies. Contact details: TAYLOR@ukzn.ac.za

Linda van Laren is a Senior Lecturer in Mathematics Education at the School of Education, University of KwaZulu-Natal. She holds a PhD in Mathematics Education. Her research interests include: Languages of education in the teaching of Mathematics in the Foundation Phase; collaborative self-study and; participatory visual methodology. Contact details: Vanlarenl@ukzn.ac.za

Frederick Veldman is an associate professor in Human Nutrition at UKZN. His previous appointments include that of Deputy Head of School, and also Dean of Teaching and Learning in the College of Agriculture, Engineering and Science, UKZN. Frederick was awarded the 2014 Nestle Nutrition

Institute of Africa award, for overall contribution to the advancement of nutrition in the African continent. He has researched and published in science education, nutrition research, and also humanitarian aid. Email address. Contact details: Veldmanf@ukzn.ac.za

Renuka Vithal, DVC: Teaching & Learning and Professor in Mathematics Education has authored and co-edited numerous articles, chapters and books in mathematics education, teacher education and research methodology. She plays a leadership role in the field of mathematics education nationally and internationally. In her current position, she has expanded her research interests to the broad field of higher education studies and actively supports the development of a range of areas and topics in the scholarship of teaching and learning in universities. Contact details: vithalr@ukzn.ac.za